

A cartoon illustration of a man in a colorful shirt and sunglasses sitting in a chair, applying a yellow substance from a jar labeled 'RAW COCONUT OIL' to a bloody wound on his arm. A speech bubble from a ring light on the left says 'But the internet said it's natural!'. A dog on the floor looks shocked with its mouth open. A large circular inset on the right shows a cross-section of the skin with bacteria (purple spiky characters) trapped under a yellow film of coconut oil. The scene is set in a room with a window, plants, and a lamp.

But the internet said it's natural!

The Curse of the Coconut Trend! It is NOT a sterile medical product. On an open wound, it traps bacteria under a greasy film. Save it for week 4!
