

European regulations mandate exceptionally strict nickel release limits for post assemblies inserted into healing piercings.

The structural integrity of the building is secondary to compliance.