

Steel alloys slowly release trapped metallic irritants when exposed to moisture.
A watertight alibi always springs a leak eventually.