Mixing different colour temperatures within the same studio creates a visually confusing environment where perceived colours constantly shift.

The master mixologist technique required a blender and absolute faith.

Gemini Notebook