

Accumulating dust and product residue on the surface of a studio lamp gradually degrades maximum light output.

The reluctance to buy a simple dusting cloth resulted in localized power failure.