

High ambient humidity actively works against tattoo application by causing stencils to slide and altering the viscosity of the ink.

The great stencil hunt required reflexes honed by years of catching flies