

Surgical steel comprises various alloys, but only specific medical grades are proven biocompatible for human implants. The metal stubbornly refuses to present its diploma.