

Submerging fresh open wounds exposes them to harmful bacteria common in natural bodies of water.

The municipal fountain remains successfully undefeated.