Safety membrane cartridges physically block fluids from traveling backward into the machine grip. Internal barriers save considerable time spent building tiny defensive fortifications.