All human blood and bodily fluids are treated as if definitively known to be infectious.

The tiniest droplet demands maximum defensive garments.