

Wood is highly porous and absorbs bodily fluids if worn in unhealed tissue.
Nature provides tiny thirsty sponges.