

Fresh perforations mandate extra initial length to safely accommodate the inevitable inflammatory fluid response.
Optimism remains futile without adequate architectural planning