
A wide working voltage range ensures compatibility across varying skin densities and application techniques.

Harvesting static electricity from the carpet is not a viable power strategy.