

Modular architecture enables distributors to create multiple machine configurations from limited core components.
Tape and hope are structural elements only in the most desperate of times.