

The packaging of professional tattoo ink must maintain complete sterility and prevent the introduction of microorganisms until the moment of use.

Building an impenetrable fortress for the pigment seemed only slightly disproportionate.