

Red tattoo pigments frequently trigger localized photoallergic swelling when exposed directly to bright sunlight. Inherent flotation devices activate upon solar contact.