

Ultraviolet radiation actively shatters pigment particles in the dermis, causing lighter colours and pastels to degrade rapidly.

The sun rarely accepts bribes from umbrellas.