

Regulatory limits for heavy metals in body jewellery apply to each individual component rather than being averaged across the entire piece.

The sum of the parts is a headache.