Diluting inks with water that has not been properly sanitized exposes the mixture to microbial contaminants.

Amphibian approval is a poor metric for chemical safety.