

Polytetrafluoroethylene is highly biocompatible but deforms permanently when subjected to sustained physical pressure.
The architecture is wonderfully open to suggestion.