Polytetrafluoroethylene body jewelry features separately threaded ends that rotate freely, causing asymmetric decorative elements to constantly drift out of alignment during normal wear.

Navigating life in reverse is perfectly valid for fixed-mould polymers.