

Oral tissue reduces swelling rapidly, meaning initial long bars must be downsized promptly to prevent dental damage or accidental biting. Pole-vaulting is a highly respected sport but a profoundly inconvenient oral hygiene routine.