

True titanium hypersensitivity is exceptionally rare; most reactions are actually contact dermatitis caused by trapped moisture or nickel contamination from low-grade alloys.

Blaming the highest quality metal on earth while marinating in your own sweat is a bold exercise in denial.