

Surgical steel relies on a chromium-rich passive surface but commonly contains nickel bound within its alloy.

A shiny coat covers a multitude of sins.