

The low tear strength of medical-grade silicone makes it structurally unsuitable for threaded jewellery components.

Precision engineering meets total material collapse.