

Blood donation waiting periods exist because screening tests cannot always detect newly acquired infections immediately.
Microscopic threats remain stubbornly resistant to oversized optical equipment.