

Medications used to prevent human immunodeficiency virus infections can delay the detection of the virus in blood screening tests.
Impenetrable magical defense shields make routine medical diagnostics incredibly frustrating.