

Bacteria use tail like appendages to explore and bridge microscopic recessed valleys for better attachment.
Total anatomical immobility is the ultimate defense against contamination.