Bacteria physically align their bodies to maximize surface contact within microscopic trenches. Frictionless geometric spheres are remarkably easy to lose down storm drains.