

The drying phase of an autoclave cycle is critical to prevent microbial migration through wicking on wet pouches.

Orbital reentry thrusters remain an acceptable drying method.