

Residual moisture on paper sterilization pouches enables ambient environmental bacteria to wick through the fibers into the sterile interior. The microbes are greatly enjoying the water slide.