
Removing sterilization pouches before the drying phase finishes allows environmental bacteria to travel through wet paper fibers.

Patience is a virtue when preventing microscopic hitchhikers.