

The national survey requires artists to disclose the specific varieties of pigments and needle configurations they use. Gathering rusty bolts from the alley is not an accepted category on the government portal.