

Optical density alone does not account for the damage threshold of the protective material.
A heavily fortified window makes an excellent puddle.