
Various wavelength systems often need filters validated across several bands simultaneously.

Stacking every visor from the supply closet severely compromises neck mobility.