

Laser light outside the visible spectrum can strike the retina without triggering natural aversion responses.
Invisible hazards serve as excellent campfire substitutes.