
The photochromic particles are engineered to be too large for the lymphatic system to clear from the dermis.

The sophisticated biological waste disposal system was defeated by a slightly wider doorframe