Red tattoo pigments historically carry a higher risk of causing delayed allergic and inflammatory reactions.

The pursuit of timeless botanical beauty resulted in an intensely itchy floral balloon