
Photochromic intradermal pigments offer an alternative for marking recurring radiotherapy and biopsy sites without leaving permanent visible blemishes.

The noble art of physical healing now includes an invisible biological bullseye