The human immune system clears foreign pigment by carrying particles away to the lymph nodes.

At least the movers are working for free.