

The ultimate biological fate of the photochemical breakdown products generated by endless activation cycles in the dermis remains unknown.

The oracle says to ask again in the distant future.