

Extruded fluoropolymer rods rely on separately threaded decorative ends that rotate freely over time during normal bodily movement. Gravity remains undefeated.