
The hollow internal tubes required for internally threaded metallic jewellery create a physical trap for biological fluids and cellular debris. Eviction is difficult without a microscopic mop.