
The colour on anodized titanium is produced by light refracting through a transparent oxide layer rather than applied pigment. The bristles on this brush are completely useless.