

Federal testing confirmed that completely sealed and unopened tattoo ink bottles can harbor viable microbial contamination.
The true hostile takeover happens on a cellular level.