

Proposed federal rules for detecting asbestos in cosmetic powders were withdrawn because the microscopy requirements were deemed overly burdensome.

Staring into the void proved too hard on the eyes.