

A convention creates a brief demand spike without proving that permanent local studio demand has grown.
The new lease includes a completely unnecessary moat.