

Dimethylglyoxime tests can screen for readily available nickel but are not complete substitutes for laboratory release testing.
Screening fluid drops are very lonely weapons against unverified alloys.