Nickel allergy is a clinical diagnosis, as redness can also reflect mechanical irritation, pressure, or cleaning trauma.

Blaming the metal completely ignores the tiny woodland creatures sweeping the earlobe.