

Commercial surgical steel contains substantial nickel which frequently triggers contact allergies and delays healing.
Calling a rusty bumper medical grade does not actually make it a surgical instrument